

I am a Poppy

As I lay on the ground I represent the soldiers who fought for freedom in Canada. I lay in front of a wooden cross that shows that we will always remember the soldiers who fought for our freedom. As people come through the metal gates looking at the crumbling walls, it's hard to think that this once was a war zone where many people passed. On this day I stand for the freedom that was won from our soldiers. The soldiers who were passed now lay in Flanders fields to forever hold their peace. Many of me are pinned to whom who remember.

I remind you how the soldiers fought for our freedom, their freedom, and the country's freedom. Whoever wears me are proud and thankful of the soldiers that were in the wars. The thought of me is the thought of our freedom. Our country proud and free. If you wear a poppy it means you remember the soldiers who fought for the war. Many people who wear a poppy have known someone who fought in the war fighting for Canada, for our freedom.

I have been used since 1921 to commemorate the soldiers who fought for Canada's freedom. The thought of the war is a sad thought. But we shall always remember the day that we won for our freedom the day Canada won. Now we all are so very thankful for the veterans who served Canada in the war.

Canada is proud to be a free country. The soldiers who lie in Flanders field are there peacefully remembering their friends that have passed remembering family's and remembering their freedom. I shall forever hold my peace for I am a poppy and I am proud.
